HER YEAR

The spring of her life,
A rose in bud,
pretty but shy,
Everyone loving her simplicity and grace,
but knowing she's untouchable.

The summer of her life,
A rose in bloom,
Everyone envious of her intricate beauty but warming to her open-faced smile, and willing to risk her few thorns to be near her.

The fall of her life,
Her petals falling off,
her beauty fading,
But the memory is still there,
So she remains loved.

The winter of her life,
Her death, her end,
But she'll come back
next spring, perhaps,
Even if she doesn't she leaves something behind which will.

The rose shall live on;
year after year,
life after life.

Kathy Cochrane

This gathering dark . . .
a sharp wave driving skyward
The last hungry gull.

Rob Cheroe

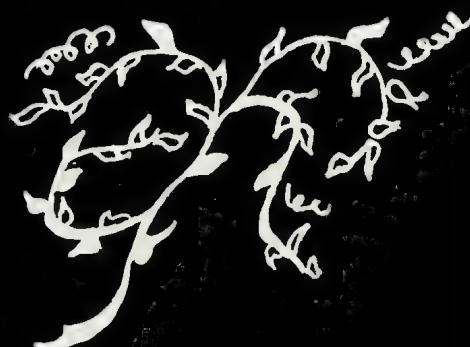

Alone on the bridge,
Below the dark water
Hides life in its depth.

Mona Hazen

CONTINUUM

Yesterday 'tis but dead and gone
Yet your bright eyes shine on
And on that smile shall glow
For a thousand suns
And moonlit nights reflecting
The beauty of a Subtle glance
Eyes of wonder Eyes of truth let not
The mind speak the Evil
Nor linger in the dark shadows of Yesteryears and countless facades
Let only the heart
Beat its steady content

Maureen Lee

TRAITOR

Gentle wind, how can you be so soft.

You have been tornadoes and destroyed beautiful things.

You have been hurricanes and hurt good people.

And you have surrounded gentle beings and turned their hearts to brittle ice.

But I cannot hate
you,
For I am the same.

Kathy Cochrane

BITTER FRIENDS

Friends they were, when it first started,
Things led to things and now they are parted.
She enjoyed herself while it lasted
Little did she know of the plan he'd mastered.
As soon as he realized how interested she was
He found someone else without reason or cause
He played his game rather well
And put her through what seemed like hell
A few months have passed since then They're both angry and bitter friends
To think things had to end this way
But it's better now than if he'd stayed.

TO YOU

That star does not glisten like the glare I know so well, but so seldom see,

Your eyes, . . .

so silent, . . .

serene, . . .

and still,

And me,

I search and beckon
for the touch of soft skin.

Your pure heart praises

The Life of Freedom,

And here, . . .

I reach, waiting, . . .

And the absence

makes my heart grow

fonder,

Follows a tear,

the voice tries to say, . . .

"I love You."

love,

Cindy

A man would walk the streets alone,
Without a place to call a home.
He'd walk the streets without his sight,
And he would beg both day and night.

Later one day he met a man,
Said, "Sir, would you please give me a hand?"
The man shook his head and walked away,
With this blind man he'd have no say.

Then along came a maiden with hair of gold,
She stopped to stare at the man so old.
She saw him sitting under a tree,
And soon she knew he could not see

She started to walk and hastened her pace,
Not caring to stay anymore in this place.
The man soon knew that she was gone,
So he picked himself up and started on.

He reached a building made of brick,
And felt for the door with his stick.
From outside he heard people in song
So he walked on in to join the throng.

He learned to love the ones who hated,
And worked to earn a crown, gold-plated.
That man soon died, but full of love,
And was taken up on the wings of a dove.

LIKE FATHER LIKE DAUGHTER

"Oh, that's nice."
He always says that but he doesn't mean it;
he doesn't even hear me.
He just goes on reading his newspaper and forgets I'm here or that I ever said anything at all.

After all,
I'm just his daughter.

But that's O. K.
I'll forgive him.
I'm used to it anyway.
I'll forget it like
I always do.
After all,
He's just my father.

Kathy Cochrane.

All sound but quiet,
All still but Nature's wind.
No thoughts of present.

All sound but quiet,
All still but Nature's wind.
All the thoughts of past.

Donny Moroz

Hallways empty now
Echoing solemn silence
Thoughtful reflection.

YOUR YEARBOOK EDITORZ KAREL KAREL KAREL KAREL

DEDICATED TO:

Mr. Yakemchuk, who joined the faculty of M.E. LaZerte in September, 1973. He brought with him his varied and rich experience in schools of all types and levels. While at LaZerte, he taught mathematics until his unexpected death in May, 1976 took him out of our midst. He was deeply appreciated by students and staff alike for his unique humor, his concern for his fellowman, and his dedication to education. Those who learned to know him have missed him greatly.

PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE TO THE YEARBOOK

As we approach the end of our seventh year of operation a chapter in our history also comes to an end. This is the year that we must say good-bye to our neighbours to the north - the Sturgeon students. We have been privileged to have had so many fine students from Bon Accord, Gibbons, Namao and Horse Hill. Students and parents from these communities have made valuable contributions to the development of the spirit and tradition of our school. Our memories will be good ones.

Congratulations and best wishes to all our students as we enter this new phase of our development.

R. P. Baker.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

There are few words that could express the grandeur, the accomplishments, and the frustrations of this year. However different the feelings were for you I hope that all of you had the best year ever in this school and I wish you all the best of everything in the future. For me this year was a challenge and I think that Hemingways' way expressed it best. And it was a very interesting thing to do and for a while it killed off Kangaroo fishing and interfered with my work. Finally, though, I went back to Kangaroo fishing, because I found that I could remember all the oceans and there was always something new about them, while the Student Union, after I had thought about it a few times blurred and I could not keep thinking about it and finally it all blurred and all became rather the same and I gave up thinking about it altogether.

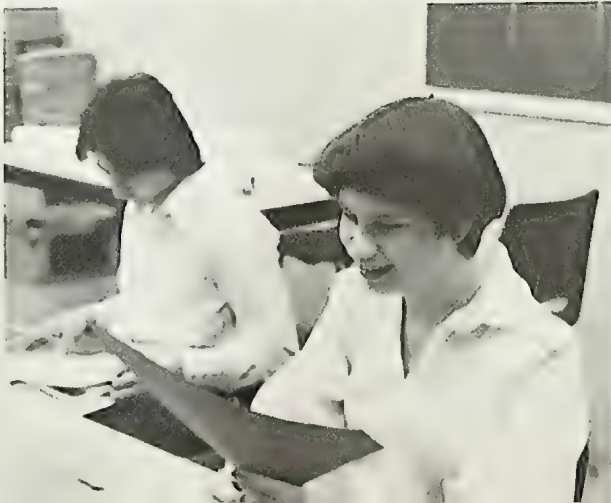

This message would not be complete without thanking the members of the Student Union for making this year the kind of year it was. I should also wish the Administration, the Teachers, the Support Staff, and the new Student Union good luck with all future activities. And in conclusion I invite you all to come Kangaroo fishing with me sometime.

Mike Kristiansen.
